At Workhug, we work closely with companies to build bespoke wellbeing programmes aimed at increasing workplace wellbeing and productivity. From in-office mindfulness and physiotherapy, to massage, beauty treatments and nutrition seminars, our services have a tangible and positive impact on team wellbeing.

The mix of physical wellbeing and beauty services that we put together for Monica Vinader, enable people to take a needed break and give everyone some precious time back.

"Giving people 'permission', in a way, to step away from their work and to do something for a short amount of time that makes them feel good and bringing back some sense of community, is the biggest benefit to me."

Workhug wellbeing services are on site once per month, and are there for whoever wants to book in advance or experience a service on the spot.

"But in addition to the actual service there are all these other intangible mental health benefits that you start feeling afterwards."

Workhug services have been key in encouraging people to take 15-20 minutes away from their desk to do something that makes them feel good and switch off a little bit."

Workhug services may have been in place at MV years before the start of the pandemic, but they proved to be instrumental in bringing people back into the office in the post-covid environment.

"I'm someone who lives on my own and needs to see people during my week to get my energy. So in our case Workhug services give people a reason to come into the office on a day when they know they will see other people because there will be a list of their colleagues enjoying the same wellbeing services."

Services: Massage & Nail Services
Frequency: Monthly, once per month

I would definitely recommend Workhug and the services offered. It creates a bit of a buzz around in the office. I definitely feel there's a more exciting atmosphere on the days when Workhug is coming in! There is also a sense of community that comes into play. I do think we get a really good value out of it!
